Funding your Rhythm Time Franchise

Starting your own Rhythm Time franchise might be more affordable than you think.

Whether you're using personal savings or seeking additional funding, there are accessible options to help you get started.

What does it cost?

Generally, initial investment costs for franchises in the children's activities sector typically range from £5,000 to £20,000. In return, you'll receive a complete business package with everything you need to hit the ground running — including training, branding, systems, and support.

A Rhythm Time Franchise starts at £13,680 plus VAT.
For this investment you can gain great rewards.

Finance Shouldn't Be a Barrier

While the costs may feel overwhelming at first, there's plenty of help available. Many new franchisees secure funding through established routes — and we're here to guide you through the process.

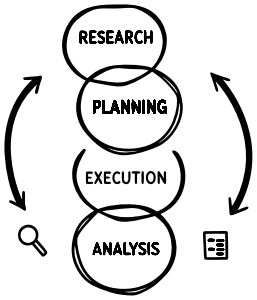

Why Franchises Attract Lenders

Unlike starting a business from scratch, buying a franchise means you're investing in a proven model with built-in support. This reduces the risk for you — and for lenders.

With expert training, step-by-step guidance, and a track record of success, franchise businesses are often seen as a safer bet by banks and loan providers.

Support with Business Planning

We provide templates and guidance to help you create a professional business plan — a key step in securing funding. You'll never be left to navigate the paperwork alone.

Popular Funding Route: Start Up Loans

Many of our franchisees use the UK government-backed Start Up Loan scheme, which offers:

- Fixed low interest rates
- Repayment terms from 1 to 5 years
- No application or early repayment fees

"These loans have been the most effective and straightforward option for our new franchisees. We know the process inside out and can help every step of the way. Many of our franchisees (including all of our latest franchisees) have used this scheme with 100% success."
Dave Pearce, Rhythm Time Director.
